A selection of poetry chosen from this competition will be used to make a book which will tell the story of the revolution in poetry.

The poems can be any style but must be historically correct. The information you will need to create your poem can be found on our website.

www.pentrichrevolution.org.uk

Poems can be made from any part of the revolution story ie.

causes, the planning, one of the characters, the arrests, the trial, the executions, the transportations, the women left behind, the whole event or any other topic you chose to do with the revolution.

The winner and runner up in each section will recieve a copy of the book once it is created.

The poems will be checked for correctness, then judged by an independent local poet and writer, Sophie Sparham.

All entries need to be in by the end of Friday August 15th 2025, they can be sent by email, post or delivered to any of our events (as advertised on facebook).

All winners will be notified and we will list all poets whose poems which are to be included in the book on our facebook page. www.facebook.com/pentrichrevolution.

The competition is free to enter, good luck.
